New to the Reiki Ken website!

For around nine months now I had been trying to find the time to update my website, but pressures of work sought to prevent me from actually sitting down and getting on with the job. Now, at last, all that work is more or less completed, and you'll be able to see the results of that on www.reikiken.com.

The two main areas are Teaching Reiki (a complete update of information) and Distant Reiki (a completely new page).

I need to write my manuals for Levels 1, 2, and 3, and once they are done I will be in a position to set dates for future courses. I intend to have the manuals compliant with CNHC requirements. I will tell you here and on my website when they are completed.

Talking of the CNHC, I also needed to have their logo on my website as an indication that the service I offer matches their professional requirements. That is now in place, hyperlinked to allow you to find out more about this leading regulatory body.

As for distant Reiki, although it is something I have been offering clients for many years it has never had a prominent place on my website. I now have a system in place to enable my distant clients to receive exactly the same standard of service that my contact clients receive. See the Distant Reiki page for more details.

If you are reading this and you don't live in NE England, take a look at the Distant Reiki page right now! You can be anywhere in the world yet still receive Reiki from me! Email me now!

On other additional pages there are also some new images. For instance, on the Testimonials page may be found this new picture -

- while on the Reiki in hospitals page you will find some new artwork there, too.

And in the near future, the Reiki under the microscope page will be renamed Reiki Research, and will have a treasure trove of new information . . .

The Indian town of Mumbai is the base for this issue's article, from an online magazine called The Health Site. Read here for how they see the future of medicine in India. Click here for the original article.

Future of medicine in India likely to combine benefits of traditional medicine with alternative practices like energy healing

January 28, 2018

The future of medicine in India is likely to combine the benefits of traditional medicine with alternative practices like energy healing, experts at a quantum energy forum said here. "Integration is the key for future medicine, wherein the traditional medicine is combined with practices like quantum energy healing, Reiki (Japanese technique of healing using energy) and 'pranic' healing (ancient practice of energy healing)," the curator of the Quantum Energy Conclave Pinky Daga said on Saturday.

The second edition of the biennial forum, being held from January 26-28, has brought together experts from across the world on quantum physics, quantum energy medicine and quantum energy devices to discuss energy medicine. Termed during the 1980s, energy medicine is considered an alternative medicine based on a "pseudoscientific" belief that healers "channel" energy into a person to cure illnesses. "Quantum energy medicine can be used to eradicate diseases and aid in better mental and physical health," claimed Daga, at the forum's venue Pyramid Valley, a meditational centre about 35 km from Bengaluru. Indian medical bodies, however, do not recognise energy medicine as a form of treatment.

Energy medicine works on the belief that all diseases have their own "vibratory rate" which can be measured and treated using electronic devices.

The quantum energy medicine practitioners claim to "treat" the diseases, right up to cancer and heart-related, liver-related illnesses, by "transmitting" energy to the diseased body cells.

"Energy medicine is at a very nascent stage in India but has great popularity in Europe, US and China. We are certain that India, too, will pick up speed with respect to energy medicine in another three years," said Daga.

The US Department of Health states energy medicine can only be a complementary and alternative medicine, which can be used alongside conventional medicine like allopathy.

With about 250 delegates and 25 speakers from various countries like the US, Canada and China, the energy conclave was organised by Thrive Art and Soul, an online platform for alternative medicine practitioners in reiki, energy healing and pranic healing.

Fred Alan Wolf from the US, a physicist and writer, Don Paris from the US, an expert in quantum energy instruments, Eva Gold from Canada, an energy medicine practitioner and instructor, Wang Gang from China, who uses traditional Chinese medicine with quantum energy technologies, were some of the speakers.

"Most of the speakers have even kept away from conventional medicine for few decades and have relied on energy-based healing," Daga averred, adding: "Energy medicine has the power to heal by itself."
